LITTLE HARRY. nutsly Inscribed to Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bourd

One year, one sad and weary year, Since thou did'at sleep upon thy bier, Little Harry!

One mournful year, since thy sweet face, Was with us in its shiblish grace ; mie in the hall and atrest.

Another year, another Spring, To our and world the Lord doth bring, Little Harry! The opening leaves are softly stirred

By balmy winds and song of bird; They come again ; but where art thou? What summer-land art brightening now! Oh! vision of a world more fair Than this, I see; and see thes there, Little Harry!

Thy soul with joy eternal thrills; Thy little feet tread heavenly hills; Thy glad eyes look on glorious things; The scraph's song thy sweet voice sings. All this ! and still longing regret Lingers around thy memory yet, Little Harry!

It is so hard to look by faith. Beyond the sleep that we call death, And feel, sweet child, that thou dost fill A destiny, bright, glorious, still ! But God, in the great Life to-be,

Will solve aright this mystery, Little Harry ! Why they to whom thou wert so doar Must sorrowfully linger here; While thy pure spirit, freed from strife Thus early gains eternal life!

On Monday, April 24, 1865, 1,866 paroled prisoners, including thirty-five officers, were put on board the boat, bound for Cairo, Illinois. She also had on board seventy cabin passengers, and eighty-five employees. Arrived at Memphie, Tennessee, Wednesday evening, 26th instant, at about 7 o'clock. Went to coal-yard above Memphis, and coaled, and left there for Cairo at two o'clock, A. M., 27th instant. When about seven miles above Mumphis the boiler, or the boilers, exploded, Soon afterward the boat caught fire, and was totally destroyed. As near as can be ascertained, only about 800 persons were saved at the time of the accident. The men were all, or for the most part, fallen in the hour of our triumph, a been satisfactorily tested just before the
